Met Opens Without Usual Glitter

NEW YORK (AP) — The society nature that usually appears on lists of people attending opening night at the Metropolitan Opera, weren't there this year.

At Monday night's opening, not a Whitney, Vanderbilt or Morgan was seen.

The Met opened too early this year for its usual first-night society customers, who hadn't returned from summering at pool resorts.

The Spanish soprano, Mercedes Caballe, had the honor of opening the season, as Violetta in Verdi's "La Traviata."
